MODULE 6.2 TENANCY/EVICTION

MODULE INTRODUCTION

In Module 6.1, we learned how housing counselors prepare their clients to be successful tenants and resolve disputes with landlords before eviction becomes a risk.

However, some counselors will have clients who face imminent eviction. Counselors can offer these clients advice on preventing an eviction from finalizing or on finding a place to live after an eviction is finalized.

It is most effective to offer this advice during initial rental housing counseling or at the time when a client is facing eviction.

In this module, you'll learn about the rental eviction process and the steps clients can take to avoid eviction. You will also learn about options for alternative housing, such as emergency shelters or transitional housing if moving becomes necessary.

LESSON OBJECTIVES

By the end of this module, you'll be able to:

1. Analyze a client's rental delinquency to help them in creating a plan to prevent eviction.
2. Apply knowledge of the basic eviction process, general timelines, and associated documents to assist a client in avoiding eviction by better understanding the process.
3. Apply knowledge of resources to help clients find housing after an eviction is finalized.

With these in mind, let's begin.

HOW TO AVOID EVICTION

LOCAL PROCESSES, PROGRAMS, AND SHELTERS

Counselors advise clients based on their understanding of the following local processes, programs, and shelters:

1. Emergency rent assistance programs
2. Jurisdiction's eviction process
3. Legal aid programs
4. Emergency shelters
5. Transitional shelters

Let's look at a case study of Jacob, an experienced housing counselor who recently moved to a new county and researches these five local resources during his first week.

We'll see what information he gathers and how he applies the information during several counseling sessions.

Note that the information presented in this module regarding Jacob's local eviction timetable, assistance programs, and shelters are fictional and intended for educational purposes only.

A Housing Counselor, Jacob

LOCAL EMERGENCY RENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Jacob first researches local emergency rent assistance programs, which offer funds to help pay rent, utilities, arrearages, and other housing expenses in urgent situations that are likely to escalate to eviction.

Note: Counselors need to ensure that referrals to assistance programs are appropriate and fit the client situation, including manufactured-home owners on leased land.

These programs offer assistance on a short-term basis or as a one-time grant and serve a different purpose than the long-term rent assistance programs such as the Housing Choice Voucher Program.

When clients struggle to make monthly housing payments, Jacob initially helps them assess their budget and living arrangements. However, once it is clear that there is no way clients can afford the payments, even after budget and living arrangement adjustments, Jacob advises clients to contact emergency rent assistance programs.

Here are a few examples of clients to whom Jacob recommended emergency rent assistance programs in his last county:

Arrearages

The total amount of past due payments owed to a lender from a borrower in mortgage payments or to a landlord from a tenant in rental payments. Also called arrears.

Freddie

Freddie has worked for the same employer for 22 years, but he was recently laid off. Since the layoff, he has been unable to keep up with his bills and received notice that his gas and electric services would be disconnected. A local emergency rental assistance program paid his utility bills until he found a new job.

Juan

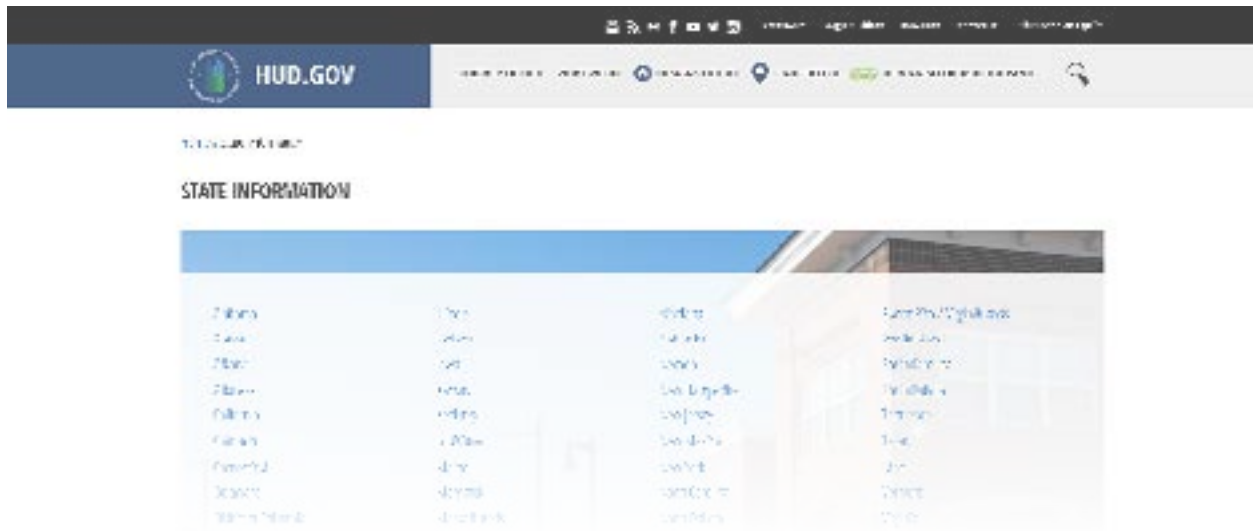

Juan had to make an unexpected car repair for $480. Because of this unexpected expense, he was $200 short of his monthly rent payment. A local emergency rent assistance program paid the $200 difference.

Liz

Liz shared a rental unit with a roommate she found on Craigslist. The roommate was not on the lease, but she had an informal agreement to pay half of the rent. The roommate unexpectedly left the state and did not leave contact information or her portion of the rent. A local emergency rent assistance program helped Liz pay rent until she was able to find a more stable roommate and arrange a formal lease agreement.

- > Jacob starts by visiting resources.HUD.gov/states
- > Select his state from the “State Information” page
- > Select “Get Rental Help” Under “I WANT TO” to learn more.
- > Review the list of nearby properties offering subsidized apartments, public housing agencies and similar resources.

Housing counselors can perform a similar search for resources in their state.

Jacob also calls United Way 211 for information on emergency rent assistance programs. United Way 211 is a nationwide service that provides information about regional housing, food, childcare, health, and other services.

Let's take a look at the information Jacob gathers. You'll notice that he focuses on eligibility standards and services so he can refer clients to the program that best matches their needs.

KNOWLEDGE CHECK 1

Jacob has clients in various situations. Which client below would Jacob advise contacting an emergency rent assistance program?

- A. The client wants to quit working to return to college and will need help paying for rent while in school.
- B. The client cannot afford a rental in the area and needs a housing subsidy to obtain a rental.
- C. The client has been living with a roommate who suddenly moves and does not leave his portion of the month's rent.
- D. The client has been notified that her rent will increase by $200 per month if she decides to remain in her apartment after her lease comes up for renewal in four months. She cannot afford to pay an additional $200 a month.

RENTAL EVICTION PROCESS

LOCAL JURISDICTION'S EVICTION PROCESS

Jacob has seen that once eviction proceedings begin, tenants who understand the process can often resolve problems before being evicted. So, Jacob moves on to research the following topic: the local jurisdiction's eviction process.

He looks at the process for both nonpayment and holdover eviction cases. Nonpayment cases, or cases where tenants don't pay rent, are the most common. Holdover evictions are cases where the landlord is evicting someone who breaches terms of the lease unrelated to payment.

We'll look at Jacob's notes about his jurisdiction's eviction process. The components of Jacob's eviction process are similar to that which exist in most jurisdictions, but each jurisdiction has unique variations.

We'll also see the options that he plans to recommend or discourage his tenants take at each step of the process. Jacob's primary goal is to educate clients about their choices and advise those needing legal guidance to seek assistance from an attorney.

Notice to Tenant

Local Jurisdiction Procedures

When: Start of the Eviction Process

The landlord, or someone appointed by the landlord, delivers a written or oral notice that includes the following:

- Reason the landlord wants the tenant evicted
- Steps tenants can take to avoid eviction
- Number of days in which the tenant must pay rent/begin abiding by the lease to avoid eviction or voluntarily move out

Note: Also called Late Letter, Notice to Vacate Letter, Notice to Quit, Eviction Notice Letter, Notice of Termination, Rental Eviction Notice, or Notice to Vacate (the Premises)

Timeline for Different Notice Types

The type of notice delivered determines the number of days a tenant has to resolve the issue. Tenants must pay rent or cure the violation of the lease to avoid eviction.

1. Pay rent or quit notice: Three to five days
2. Cure or quit notice: Immediately to 30 days
3. Unconditional quit notice: Immediately to 30 days

In some cases, tenants are not given the option to resolve the issue and remain in the property. Though they may have various associated timetables, tenants must vacate after certain offenses, such as:

- Selling illegal substances on the premises.
- Presenting inaccurate information about criminal record, criminal activity, or prior evictions.
- Repeating the same lease violation within six months.

Possible Client Actions

Recommend:

- Take steps to cure the violation, as outlined in the notice. In nonpayment cases, if a landlord accepts rent from a tenant at any time, the eviction process legally ends.
- Vacate voluntarily if the client is unable to resolve the issue and has somewhere else to go.
- Deny the problem if the reason the landlord cites for eviction is not accurate. Refer the client to a legal aid agency.

Discourage:

- Ignore the notice.

Notice of Petition

Local Jurisdiction Procedures

When: After the Period Allowed in the Notice to Tenant

A landlord can file an unlawful detainer complaint if the tenant has not paid rent or cured the lease violation by the end of the period outlined in the notice to the tenant. This prompts the court to serve the tenant a notice of petition.

When: Once the Landlord Files an Unlawful Detainer

The court serves the tenant a notice of petition, which includes:

- The reason the landlord wants the tenant to be evicted.
- A request for an “answer.”
- A due date for an answer, typically five days after being served a notice.
- A request for the tenant’s presence in court.
- A court date.
- The consequences of not appearing in court.

Note: Note: The tenant gives an answer, or “response,” to the Clerk of the Housing Court, either as a written or oral response. The answer will explain any arguments that counter the landlord’s claims. For example:

- The tenant has already paid rent or a portion of the rent.
- The landlord has neglected to repair the apartment as needed.

Generally, the tenant also includes documentation supporting the counterargument in the answer.

In most cases, the answer must be returned within five days. It is important to emphasize this to clients.

Possible Client Actions

Recommend:

- Take steps to cure the violation. In nonpayment cases, if a landlord accepts rent from a tenant at any time, the eviction process legally ends.
- Submit an answer to the court. Refer the client to a legal aid agency.

Discourage:

- Ignore the notice. Those who do not answer the petition within the allotted time period will automatically lose the case and will be evicted.

Unlawful Detainer

The act of retaining possession of property without legal right. The term ordinarily refers to the conduct of a tenant who is in possession of an apartment or leased property and refuses to leave the premises upon expiration or termination of the lease.

Court Hearing

Local Jurisdiction Procedures

When: 5–12 Days after the Notice of Petition Is Served

The court hearings include a resolution component and a trial component.

The resolution component is the first part of the court hearing. The landlord and tenant discuss possible agreements. For example, they can agree on a payment plan that permits the tenant to pay off any overdue rent over a certain period of time.

If they do not reach an agreement during resolution, the case goes before a judge who issues a final judgment.

Possible Client Actions

Recommend:

- Appear in court. Recommend that clients bring:
 - Any written communication they have with the landlord.
 - Lease and renewal leases.
 - Proof of rent payment.
 - Photographs of problems in the rental unit.
- Come to an agreement during the resolution. Recommend that clients pay the amount owed or cure the lease violation by the date specified so the eviction process legally ends. When tenants cannot adhere to the agreement, they can request a deadline extension from the court.

Discourage:

- Missing the court date. Those who don't appear in court will automatically have a judgment placed on their record.

Note: Filing fees for the eviction court process are charged to the tenant and added to the judgment, potentially increasing it from $1,000 to $6,000 with additional filing costs.

Final Judgment

Local Jurisdiction Procedures

When: Within Five Days of Court Hearing

The tenant must pay the judgment or cure the violation of the lease if the judge decides the client is at fault. Tenants may also choose to appeal during this period.

Possible Client Actions

Recommend:

- Abide by the final judgment. If the tenant pays rent or cures the violation of the lease within a five-day period, the case will be closed.
- Appeal the final judgment.

Discourage:

- Avoid ignoring the final judgment. Failure to pay rent or rectify lease violations within five days of the final judgment will result in eviction.

Eviction

Local Jurisdiction Procedures

When: Final Judgment Made, 72-Hour Warning Issued

If the tenant does not respond to the final judgment during the appeal period, the landlord can file to issue a writ of possession, authorizing the removal of a tenant and their belongings from the rental unit. A copy of the writ of possession, which includes the date and time after which the eviction can take place, must be delivered to the tenant at least 72 hours before the eviction. After the 72-hour period, the landlord has two eviction options:

1. Lock Change Eviction: The landlord changes the lock on the unit but allows the tenant 24 hours of access to the unit to remove their possessions. Any possessions remaining after that period become the landlord's property.
2. Forcible Eviction: A law enforcement officer executes the eviction, forcibly removing the tenant and their belongings if necessary.

Writ of Possession

A court order that serves as an eviction from a property. The writ outlines the specific time a person has to vacate the property before authorizing an official to forcibly remove a person and their belongings from a property.

Possible Client Actions

Recommend:

- Remove personal belongings as soon as possible.
- Contact housing counselor for help to arrange post-eviction housing.

Discourage:

- Leave personal belongings behind.

Note: This eviction process is fictional and intended for educational purposes only. While the overall legal process will be similar in most jurisdictions, the timetable will vary. Housing counselors should advise clients in need of legal advice to contact a legal aid office.

KNOWLEDGE CHECK 2

The scenarios listed below involve clients who are facing possible eviction for violating a no-pet clause in their leases. Match each scenario on the left with the appropriate client action that a housing counselor would likely recommend to someone facing possible eviction.

- | | |
|--|---|
| A. A client with two cats has received a cure or quit notice. | ___ 1. Consult with a housing counselor to find housing in preparation for the forced eviction. |
| B. A client with an assistance dog ignores a notice to the tenant and is subsequently served a notice of petition. | ___ 2. Send an "answer" to the court explaining that the animal is not considered a pet. |
| C. After the client with an iguana ignores several notices, the landlord changes the locks and advises him that he will be allowed to access the rental unit for only 24 more hours. | ___ 3. Find another home for the animal within the time period outlined by the judge. |
| D. The client with a ferret goes to trial, and the final judgment declares her to be at fault. | ___ 4. Find another home for the animal within the time period outlined in the notice. |

HOW TO AVOID EVICTION

LOCAL LEGAL AID PROGRAMS

Although Jacob can explain the eviction process to his clients and describe their options at different points along the way, he cannot offer them legal advice. He plans to refer clients to legal aid services for legal advice when necessary.

Legal aid programs offer disadvantaged individuals low-cost or free advice, services, or ongoing legal representation. Typically, legal aid programs limit their services to residents with legal issues arising within specific counties or cities.

Service is also normally limited to areas of civil (non-criminal) law, which includes tenant-landlord issues.

To find information about legal aid programs in his region, Jacob uses his agency's resource list to identify legal aid providers with whom the agency partners. Jacob finds two providers and visits each agency's website to learn more.

In the event of a disaster or national emergency, like the COVID-19 National Emergency, housing counselors should visit the HUD Exchange to stay informed on relief options and other resources that will assist clients with their housing needs.

Let's take a look at the information he found.

MANUFACTURED HOME LAND-LEASE EVICTION PROCESS

Most states' manufactured home eviction process will differ depending on the property and tenancy type. Manufactured-home owners who own the home and the land as real property are subject to the foreclosure process discussed in Module 5.1. Tenants who rent the manufactured home and the lot are subject to the same eviction processes as a tenant who rents an apartment, as described previously in this module. For those who own the manufactured home and rent the lot, many states factor into the eviction process the unique rights and responsibilities of the homeowner/tenant, the landlord, and any lender who holds a lien on the manufactured home.

Manufactured-home owners who are evicted from their lot or community must generally remove their home from the lot, which can be very costly. Additionally, the home could be damaged in the move. Because of this, most state landlord and tenant laws provide specific considerations for manufactured-home owners on leased lots.

For example, in some states, a manufactured-home owner who rents a space or site in a licensed manufactured home park can only be evicted for "just cause," such as:

- Nonpayment of rent.
- Violating the lease, including failure to maintain grounds.
- Criminal, dangerous, or disruptive behavior.
- Repossession of the manufactured home by the lender.
- Moving into the property without the landlord's permission.

Landlords can also refuse to renew a lease with just cause, which could result in a hold-over eviction if the tenant does not remove the home when the lease ends.

Once the landlord identifies just cause, they will issue an eviction notice to the tenant, starting the eviction process. If the issue is not resolved within the specified time in the notice, the landlord must file an unlawful detainer in court to remove the home from the site. The tenant is then given a limited period to respond. If they do not answer, the court will issue a default judgment in favor of the landlord. Even if the tenant appears in court, the court may still rule in favor of the landlord and order the tenant to vacate the site, taking the home with them.

Some states allow landlords to charge storage fees and seize the home if it remains on the lot after eviction. In certain situations, landlords have the authority to move the home beyond their property line and include the moving costs as part of the eviction judgment charged to the homeowner.

Often times, tenants in a manufactured home community may be evicted because the landlord decides to sell the community or re-develop the land for another purpose. In cases where the landlord decides to change the land use or sell the land, most states require that tenants be given generous advance notice—often six months to one year—in writing. The notice must do the following:

- Inform the tenant of the intended change of land use.
- Advise the tenant of the need to secure another location for the manufactured home.
- Provide a relocation plan to assist tenants.

If the lease is ended due to change of land use, tenants may be entitled to moving expenses as well as reimbursement for a manufactured home that is too old to be moved.

Lienholder Rights and Responsibilities

As a lienholder on the manufactured home, the lender has a right to the home as collateral, which is a factor in the eviction process. Depending on the lender's leniency and the loan agreement terms, the homeowner may need permission from the lender to relocate the home upon eviction.

In the event a manufactured-home owner is being evicted and has defaulted on the home loan, the lender will often work with the manufactured home community owner to negotiate the back rent and storage fees to be paid until the home is sold or removed from the park by the lender. In most cases, the fees paid by the lender can be added to the judgment against the borrower resulting from the repossession.

Relocating a Manufactured Home upon Eviction

Manufactured-home owners facing eviction who are interested in relocating their home should consider the steps required to move as well as the costs, laws, and risks involved. Housing counselors should encourage clients to consider the following factors when deciding whether to relocate or to sell or abandon the home:

Condition of the home. Depending on the size, age, and general condition of the home and the distance to the new site, it may be too risky to relocate a manufactured home.

Cost to move the home. Manufactured-home owners facing eviction due to nonpayment of rent may be unable to afford the $5,000-$20,000 it may cost to relocate their home. The cost of detaching the home from the site and utilities, transporting and reattaching the home to the new site and utilities, and the materials, permits, and insurance may be out of reach.

Finding a new site. Manufactured-home owners with an eviction in the public record may find it difficult to become approved for a site in a new manufactured home community. When planning to move a home to vacant land outside of a manufactured home community, manufactured-home owners must first verify their home meets the proper building codes and zoning requirements of the region. Additionally, a manufactured home should never be placed in a more restrictive wind, thermal, or roof load zone than that for which it was built.

Hiring qualified movers. Manufactured-home owners should search for an experienced moving company with the appropriate insurance. They should be licensed to move homes in the original state and any other states the home might pass through. The company should be able to acquire the necessary permits and bonds and should know whether or not a police escort is needed.

RENTAL EVICTION PROCESS

COUNSELING ON EVICTION PROCESS

The same week that Jacob learns about his jurisdiction’s eviction process and legal aid programs, he is able to use the information to assist a client named Ying. Let’s look at his online counseling session with Ying below.

A client, Ying

YING: I don’t know what to do! I received a notice today requesting that I come to court. It says that I will be evicted if I do not go.

JACOB: Did you receive any other notices requesting that you pay rent or begin abiding by any other component of the lease?

YING: Yes, about three weeks ago, I received a notice saying that I needed to pay rent or vacate in five days.

I did not do either. I will not pay rent until my landlord fixes the ceiling, which leaks whenever it rains. I have called him at least ten times to tell him, but he never answers his phone.

JACOB: Okay, we can make a plan together that, if followed, will help you avoid eviction and all the fees associated.

First, you need to write an “answer” to the clerk of the court that explains that you have not paid rent because there are repairs that the landlord has neglected to make. You’ll need to include a record that you have made timely payments in the past as well as documentation of your repair requests.

I will give you the contact information for a legal aid service that can give you further guidance on submitting your answer. Based on your income, I believe you will qualify for assistance free of charge.

It is essential that you bring your answer to the court in the next five days, as outlined in the notice you received.

YING: Will that fix everything?

JACOB: No, you will still need to appear in court on the assigned date.

Before then, take pictures of spots where the ceiling is leaking and bring them to court with you. Also, bring proof that you paid rent on time during your entire tenancy, up until this issue began.

YING: I am nervous about going to court. What will it be like?

JACOB: There will be two phases of the court process, the resolution phase and the trial phase.

During resolution, you will seek to reach an agreement with the landlord.

YING: What kind of agreement?

JACOB: In your case, the agreement might state that the landlord will fix the ceiling by a certain date, and you will pay him all of the overdue rent by a certain date.

Make sure you understand and agree to any conditions of the agreement reached in the resolution.

AFTER EVICTION

LOCAL EMERGENCY SHELTERS

When clients seek help from Jacob after an eviction is finalized, his first priority is to help them find an immediate place to stay. While new permanent housing is ideal, clients may need access to temporary solutions while they search for stable long-term housing.

He encourages clients to first reach out to family and friends who might be willing to host them for free or for an affordable fee. When that is not an option, he refers them to local emergency shelters that offer temporary housing and services to those in immediate need.

Let's take a look at the list of local emergency shelters he put together.

YING: Is there still a trial phase if we reach an agreement during the resolution phase?

JACOB: If you reach a satisfactory agreement during resolution, you will not need to go to trial, and you will not be evicted.

Since Ying spoke with Jacob before her eviction was finalized, she had several options to avoid eviction. Let's now take a look at how Jacob helps clients whose eviction has been finalized.

KNOWLEDGE CHECK 3

All of the following clients are facing challenges with rental housing. Which client would Jacob likely refer to an emergency shelter?

- A. The client had an unexpected medical expense and knows she will not be able to afford utilities for several months.
- B. The client cannot afford a rental in the new area where he plans to move.
- C. The client has received a pay rent or quit notice.
- D. The client did not pay rent within five days of the final judgment and will be evicted in 24 hours.

KNOWLEDGE CHECK 4

One of Jacob’s clients, Anna, has been informed by the City Marshal that she has 72 hours to move out of her rental home. Jacob recommends that she temporarily live in an emergency shelter. Which statement is false based on what you know about homeless shelters?

- A. Homeless shelters do not allow individuals to stay longer than 90 days.
- B. Homeless shelters may provide training, counseling, and case management.
- C. Homeless shelters may require residents to pay a small fee for admittance.
- D. Homeless shelters accept anyone who arrives during intake hours.

TRANSITIONAL SHELTERS

Before meeting with his next clients, who are facing eviction, Jacob reviews the information he compiled about local transitional shelters. These shelters offer housing and support to individuals who are ready to leave emergency shelters but still need assistance transitioning to independence. Let’s see what he finds.

- 3 Many transitional shelters only accept residents who have already participated in a short-term program, such as those offered by emergency shelters.
- 4 Case management programs help individuals establish independent living and are a common component of transitional shelters.
- 5 When suggesting action steps to clients seeking post-eviction housing, it is useful for clients to know the maximum amount of time they will be able to remain in the transitional shelter. Most shelter stay maximums do not exceed 24 months.
- 6 While some shelters offer free services, others may require residents to pay a portion of their income.

CLIENT ACTION PLAN AFTER EVICTION

Let's now observe a session that Jacob has with his clients Anthony and Mercy, who are facing eviction.

After preparing the clients' budget, Jacob continues filling out a Client Action Plan. He knows that Anthony and Mercy are facing eviction, but he asks for further details in order to identify their specific goals and suggest appropriate action steps.

Two Clients, Anthony and Mercy

JACOB: Can you describe a bit more about your housing and eviction situation?

ANTHONY: We have rented our apartment for the past three years, but yesterday the City Marshal appeared at our door and said that in 72 hours he would be taking all of our possessions from our apartment if we didn't do it ourselves first.

JACOB: Were you contacted by the court or your landlord prior to this?

MERCY: Yes, but we hadn't responded yet because they were asking for us to pay rent, and we didn't have enough money. We were planning to pay first thing when Anthony got a new job, but that didn't happen as soon as we expected.

JACOB: Well, I think the best thing to do now is make a plan for where you will stay tomorrow night, and where you will stay until you are able to rent another apartment.

ANTHONY: We called our cousin William before meeting with you to see if he will let us stay with him.

MERCY: He said no because his in-laws are staying with him for the month, and they only have two bedrooms. William is our only relative in the area, so we don't really have anywhere else to go.

Jacob then writes down detailed steps on a Client Action Plan for Anthony and Mercy as they discuss options. Let's take a look at the Client Actions/Tasks portion.

KNOWLEDGE CHECK 5

Tamika is trying to decide whether staying in a transitional shelter is the right option for her and calls Jacob for advice. Which statement is false based on what you know about transitional shelters?

- A. They typically house those who are ready to leave emergency shelters but still need assistance transitioning to independence.
- B. They are a viable option for affordable housing.
- C. Some shelters offer programs to help youth residents.
- D. Each has unique criteria that determines who will be accepted.

SUMMARY

In this module, you learned to:

1. Analyze a client’s rental delinquency to help them in creating a plan to prevent eviction.
2. Apply knowledge of the basic eviction process, general timelines, and associated documents to assist a client in avoiding eviction by better understanding the process.
3. Apply knowledge of resources to help clients find housing after an eviction is finalized.

KNOWLEDGE CHECK ANSWER KEY

- 1. (C) The client has been living with a roommate who suddenly moves and does not leave his portion of the month's rent.

If the roommate did not leave his portion of the rent, the client may not have enough money to pay the full amount of rent. If he does not pay in full, he may be threatened by eviction. Emergency rent assistance programs are likely to assist in this situation.

Incorrect answers: (A) The client wants to quit working to return to college and will need help paying for rent while in school—Emergency rent assistance programs typically offer one-time grants to help pay for rent or other housing expenses in emergency situations that are out of an individual's control. This client would not likely qualify for such programs since she would be choosing to quit a job and would need long-term assistance; (B) The client cannot afford a rental in the area and needs a housing subsidy to obtain a rental—Applying for a long-term rent assistance program, such as the Housing Choice Voucher Program, would be a better fit for this client (D) The client has been notified that her rent will increase by $200 per month if she decides to remain in her apartment after her lease comes up for renewal in four months. She cannot afford to pay an additional $200 a month—Since the rent increase is four months away, the client has several other options to solve her predicament before resorting to emergency rent assistance programs. During those four months, she can work with a housing counselor to adjust her budget, seek additional sources of income, search for more affordable housing, or apply for a long-term rent assistance program.

- 2. Correct matched items:

(C) After the client with an iguana ignores several notices, the landlord changes the locks and advises him that he will be allowed to access the rental unit for only 24 more hours: 1. Consult with a housing counselor to find housing in preparation for the forced eviction.

(B) A client with an assistance dog ignores a notice to the tenant and is subsequently served a notice of petition: 2. Send an “answer” to the court explaining that the animal is not considered a pet.

(D) The client with a ferret goes to trial, and the final judgment declares her to be at fault: 3. Find another home for the animal within the time period outlined by the judge.

(A) A client with two cats has received a cure or quit notice: 4. Find another home for the animal within the time period outlined in the notice.

3. (D) The client did not pay rent within five days of the final judgment and will be evicted in 24 hours.

Emergency shelters offer temporary housing and services to those in immediate need.

Incorrect answers: (A) The client had an unexpected medical expense and knows she will not be able to afford utilities for several months—A rent assistance program may be better to contact in this circumstance; (B) The client cannot afford a rental in the new area where he plans to move—A long-term rental assistance program may be better to contact in this circumstance (C) The client has received a pay rent or quit notice—At this point, there are still steps that the client can take to prevent eviction.

4. (D) Homeless shelters accept anyone who arrives during intake hours.

Each emergency shelter has unique criteria that determine who will be accepted, and not everyone will qualify.

Incorrect answers: (A) Homeless shelters do not allow individuals to stay longer than 90 days—Each shelter sets its own maximum stay period, but most do not exceed 90 days; (B) Many homeless shelters may offer training, counseling, or case management, varying between shelters. However, most shelters provide at least one of these services (C) Homeless shelters may require residents to pay a small fee for admittance—Although most emergency shelters offer all services for free, some require residents to pay a portion of their adjusted income as rent.

5. (B) They are a viable option for affordable housing.

Transitional shelters are temporary housing solutions that serve people who are not yet ready for independent living and prepare residents to find affordable housing.

Incorrect answers: (A) They typically house those who are ready to leave emergency shelters but still need assistance transitioning to independence—Transitional shelters typically host those who have been staying at an emergency shelter or other support facility; (C) Some shelters offer programs to help youth residents—In Jacob's area, and in most areas, there are shelters that will accept parents and their children. They may offer programs for the youth such as youth tutoring, sports, classes, or free school supplies (D) Each has unique criteria that determines who will be accepted—For example, some shelters might only accept women, and others might only accept men.

NOTICE TO TENANT LETTER

HOME PROPERTIES, LLC
PO BOX 101 | Anytown, USA 10101
555-5555

July 24, 2024

Mr. Joe Renter
101 Tenancy Lane
Apartment A-1
Anytown, USA 10101

Re:	RENT FOR UNIT	101 Tenancy Lane, Unit A-1
	TOTAL AMOUNT DUE	$1,670.50

Dear Mr. Renter:

As of the date of this letter, The Landlord Company has not received payment for the unit at 101 Tenancy Lane, Apartment A-1. The total amount due to cure the delinquency is $1,670.50.

As a reminder, payment compliance is a requirement of the lease agreement. Rent is due on the first day of the month and considered late after the fifth day of each month. Residents shall render all late rents and fees to management only by certified check, cashier's check, or money order.

You are hereby notified that the total amount due must be paid by August 7, 2024 in order to avoid lease termination and dispossessory proceedings, which would take an additional $350.00 to cure and stop. These terms are outlined in Section 2, Paragraph 3 of your lease agreement.

We certainly hope that you can continue to occupy your unit without any further incidents, as lease termination is NOT an action we wish to pursue.

Please contact us as soon as possible to make arrangements to pay the full amount due.

Kind regards,

Jane Good
